April 4, 2019

Dear Amherst Families,

This has been a very unusual school year dealing with inclement weather. We have had eight full days of school canceled, one late start, and one early release day. We are looking at the following plan to make up the lost instructional hours for our students and staff.

Here at the Tomorrow River School District, we will be able to meet the legal requirements of instructional hours by the addition of February 15 and 18. We WILL also have school on Monday, April 22, and beginning April 8 and for the remainder of the school year, we will add five minutes to the morning and five minutes to the afternoon (resulting in 10 additional instructional minutes per day). This will mean buses will arrive at home five minutes later in the evenings. The morning bus times will NOT be altered. Wednesday, June 5 will remain our last day of school for students, but will now be a FULL day of school.

Now that it is April, we hope to not incur any more inclement weather this school year. If another weather day occurs, we will communicate how to make up the time.

Thank you for your continued support in your child's educational endeavors.

Sincerely,

The Tomorrow River School District's Administrative Team
